Dr. Brotoji Bhattacharyya, Assistant Professor, Human Resource Development Centre, University of Burdwan

"Education is a social process of development of all capacities (physical, mental, social, and moral) in an individual which enables him to adjust in the society, control and improve the social environment." This global concept of Education cannot be sustained without help of politics. According to the conceptual frame of 'Staff-line' theory of public administration, education acts as a line to implement the educational policy made by state authority which is governed by political ideology. How education is guided and shaped by politics and how politics can be value-oriented by the influence of education - that is the crux of this Seminar. Teacher education is the integral part of the present global education system. Can this education system stay away from politics? Or by the influence of politics can it go ahead? That is also hidden area which will be explored in this Seminar. It is the general trend of the welfare political system that education and medical care—two core fields for transforming human-being to human resource are served by the Government. How education is nourished by politics and how education becomes the main tools for governing society - this is also hypothesis of this event.

Key Take-aways of the Seminar:

- Researchers and scholars will be benefitted by achieving new thoughts which will have to help to explore their new doors of research both in Education and Politics.
- Teaching apprentices (B.Ed and M.Ed) and learners of social science will be inspired and their cognitive faculty will be elevated by attending the talks and discussion of erudite scholars.

National Workshop on

Developing Communication Skills: A Journey towards an Attitude

Eminent professors, language trainers from various universities,
Eminent experts from The British Institutes

Ramakrishna Mission Sikshanamandira

Belur Math, Howrah - 711202
(under RUSA 2- Component 8 Grant)

(19th August, 2019 to 29th August, 2019)

Workshop Objectives

Learning a language doesn't mean the acquisition of literary craftsmanship, on the contrary, to know a language at present means to be effectively competent in various communication skills. Considering the growing demand of English language and related soft skills and the overall significance of English language as a tool for global communication, the present workshop aims to develop and enhance the linguistic and communicative competence of the learners. The focus is on honing the skills of reading, listening, speaking and writing, classroom management and continuing professional development (CPD) for English language teachers.

Workshop Methodology

- ❁ Participant - centred approach with group and pair work.
- ❁ Brainstorming
- ❁ Overall interaction

Outcome Expectancies

- ❁ To discuss attitudes towards teaching reading, listening, speaking, writing and other soft skills.
- ❁ Skills in effective classroom management are central to teaching and require consistency, a sense of fairness and courage. These skills also require that teachers must understand the psychological and developmental levels of their students.
- ❁ To explore the benefits of continuing professional development (CPD).
- ❁ To develop students' presentation skills.
- ❁ To help the students to be familiarized with the job interview process.
